Menomonie, Wis. – Four area choirs will perform music from Estonia, Poland and Ukraine that speaks to the perils of war and the desire for peace. “To Freedom” will be held at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 3, at Our Savior’s Lutheran Church, 910 Ninth St. E., Menomonie.

University of Wisconsin-Stout Symphonic Singers and Chamber Choir, conducted by Director of Choral Activities Jerry Hui, will be joined by Schola Cantorum of Eau Claire and select members of the Menomonie Middle School choirs.

Highlights of the concert will include:

- “Hej Sokoly,” (“Hey Falcon”) a Polish folk song about a soldier’s longing for his Ukrainian beloved
- “Raua Needmine,” (“Curse Upon Iron”) an Estonian song, at times resembling an ancient chant, and other times an air raid siren
- “Vox in Rama,” (“A Voice in Ramah”) by Polish Baroque composer Mikolaj Zielenski
- “Ukrainale,” (“For Ukraine”) composed by Estonian contemporary composer Erkki-Sven Tüür only six months ago
- Ukrainian folk song “Shchedryk,” often known as “Carol of the Bells” in the U.S.

Siim Sööt, honorary consul of Estonia, will provide a presentation on Estonian history and culture during the concert.

Swan Lake Ballet and Ganna Ensemble, an Eau Claire-based dance studio, will perform to some of the songs. The ensemble is led by Ganna Berge, a lecturer in UW-Stout's mathematics, statistics and computer science department. She was born in Crimea, a peninsula that borders Ukraine and Russia.

Viewers are also invited to an art exhibit celebrating the heritage of Estonia, Poland and Ukraine. "To Freedom" features three international artists and is on display through Tuesday, Dec. 20, at UW-Stout's Furlong Gallery in Micheels Hall.

A display case that introduces Ukrainian history, culture and folk art is set up in the Memorial Student Center. The display was created by Natalia Ripeckyj's family, a Ukrainian family in Eau Claire, and exchange student Iryna Levada from Zaporizhzhia, Ukraine.

"I hope people who attend the concert or visit the exhibition will gain a new appreciation of the culture and history from Central Europe and may be motivated to seek further understanding in this region that has dominated recent news," Hui said.

The School of Art and Design collaborated with many external partners to bring "To Freedom" to life, including the official cultural arms of three countries: the Estonian Consulate General in New York, the Polish Cultural Institute New York and the Ukrainian Institute of America in New York.

"It is a rare opportunity for UW-Stout to partner directly with cultural bearers of specific geographical regions in creating these rich educational experiences," Hui said.
