Nordic wins 2025 Best in KLAS award for Clinical Optimization as firm celebrates its 15th anniversary

MADISON, Wis. — February 5, 2025 — Nordic®, a global health and technology consulting company, has achieved a Best in KLAS designation for Clinical Optimization in the 2025 Best in KLAS Awards - Software and Services report. The annual report, comprised of feedback gathered from thousands of providers in 2024, recognizes top-rated software and services companies in the healthcare IT industry who excel in helping healthcare professionals improve patient care.

“The KLAS Clinical Optimization award is a testament to our team and their ability to drive change for our healthcare clients who are focused on the mission of improving how care is delivered,” said Paul Slaughter, chief operating officer, Nordic. “As we celebrate 15 years of empowering our customers’ clinical, operational, and financial success, we are especially proud of the Best in KLAS designation. Through the delivery of industry-leading services, we continue to help clients stay ahead of the changing needs of the healthcare ecosystem and make a lasting impact on healthcare together.”

Nordic, founded shortly after the signing of the Health Information Technology for Electronic and Clinical Health (HITECH) Act, was early to market in bringing experienced talent to healthcare organizations seeking to implement Epic and Cerner, now Oracle Health. The firm continues its commitment by maximizing the EHR experience of clinicians and care teams at leading healthcare organizations around the world. Nordic’s team of experts, proficient in the leading EHR systems, bring valuable data and a track record of success to help healthcare leaders tackle industry challenges, enhance clinician and patient satisfaction, and optimize their EHRs.

“By focusing on clinical process improvement and empowering teams to operate at the top of their licenses, we are enabling our clients to deliver the highest quality care through the use of clinical technologies and digital health tools while also improving the provider and care team experience,” said Mary Sirois, managing director, clinical transformation and innovation, Nordic. “This award transcends the work we’re doing at Nordic, helping health systems gain value from their investments in technology and use data to provide patient-centered care. Our goal is to go above and beyond in how we deliver value to clients, and we are proud to be recognized for the impact we're making."

Since Nordic's inception in 2010, the company has expanded its role from a staffing firm to an end-to-end solution provider with enhanced offerings to keep up with the evolving healthcare landscape. With strategic advisory, digital and cloud initiatives, implementation and support, ERP services, and managed services, healthcare organizations can address clinical, operational, and financial challenges with Nordic as their strategic partner.
