The ISPE Names Impact Association Management as AMC

[Madison, WI]: Impact Association Management (Impact) is thrilled to announce a new partnership with the International Society for Pharmacoepidemiology (ISPE), a global organization dedicated to advancing public health by fostering the open exchange of scientific information and shaping policy, education, and advocacy in the field of pharmacoepidemiology.

"The International Society of Pharmacoepidemiology values communication and collaboration, which were driving factors in our selection of Impact as our new management company," said ISPE President, Mary Beth Ritchey. "We appreciate the energy the Impact team brings and look forward to a long-lasting relationship that creates value for our Society and its members."

Pharmacoepidemiology is a scientific discipline that applies epidemiological methods to evaluate the use, benefits, and risks of medical products and interventions in human populations. ISPE's diverse membership includes professionals from the pharmaceutical industry, academia, government agencies, and private organizations, all dedicated to advancing this critical field. With members in 53 countries and national chapters in Argentina, Belgium, Denmark, and the Netherlands, ISPE serves as a truly international forum for knowledge-sharing and scientific collaboration.

From the very beginning, Impact and ISPE shared a mutual commitment to enhancing operational efficiency and ensuring long-term sustainability. Within the first 90 days, the Impact team collaborated with ISPE leadership to streamline processes, improve contract management, and strengthen financial oversight—laying a strong foundation for future growth.

"Knowing ISPE was looking for a boutique approach—customized service, attention to detail, expert staff, and direct access to C-suite leadership—Impact was a natural fit," said Jodi Fisher,

CEO and Founder of Impact. "We are excited to bring our expertise in global membership and scientific associations to support ISPE's mission and continued growth."
